

The Center for Excellence in Wetland & Stream Restoration presents the:

Eastern Regional Wetland Restoration Institute SEPTEMBER 9 - 14, 2007

Are you interested in learning how to restore wetlands that help the environment by improving habitat for fish and wildlife, cleaning runoff, and reducing flooding? Then you're invited to attend the Eastern Regional Wetland Restoration Institute to be held in eastern Kentucky at Olympia Springs on the Daniel Boone National Forest. The Wetland Restoration Institute is a hands-on program of instruction taught by a team of experts who want you to acquire the skills necessary to begin building wetlands in your community.

The training is designed for individuals that work for government agencies, nonprofit organizations, and consulting companies who have a strong interest in learning more about highly effective construction and management practices for ecosystem restoration. The high number of instructors provides an ideal setting where students can talk one-on-one with specialists to learn more about wetlands and how to develop successful restoration programs. Participants will travel outdoors each day to examine all facets of wetland management, from identifying wetlands and streams altered hundreds of years ago to participating in actual wetland restoration projects.

Partners Include:

-  Eastern Kentucky PRIDE
-  US Forest Service San Dimas Technology and Development Center
-  University of Kentucky Tracy Farmer Center for the Environment
-  University of Louisville Stream Institute
-  FMSM Engineers
-  Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources
-  US Forest Service, Daniel Boone National Forest
-  Agri-Drain Corporation
-  Ducks Unlimited, Inc.
-  USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service
-  US Environmental Protection Agency
-  US Fish and Wildlife Service
-  Copperhead Environmental Consulting, Inc.
-  Association of State Wetland Managers
-  East Kentucky Power Cooperative, Inc.
-  Sheltowee Environmental Education Coalition

Visit www.kypride.org for more information or contact Ms. Kandris Goodwin, e-mail: Kandris.wunderlich@uky.edu, phone (859) 519-8515.
Applications are available at www.kypride.org and are due by May 1, 2007.
Scholarships are available.

